- The New York State World's Fair Pavilion in the Bronx, once a shining symbol, now sits as a haunting reminder of what became of the age of optimism that was the 1960s. A new documentary, Modern Ruin, now in the fundraising stage, will tell the story of architects Philip Johnson and Richard Foster during the glory days of the Fair and chronicles the site's demise over the past 50 years. The documentary covers the years of neglect and recent growing advocacy efforts to save and repurpose the iconic structure. NCMH is a major sponsor and we will be one of the first premieres! You can contribute too, via Kickstarter. This is architecture we love, give 'em a few bucks!
